Harbour Freight gives back to veterans, schools and first respondersJonathan Weiss/Shutterstock/ShutterstockHarbor Freight can offer deep discounts all year round on its unrivalled inventory of quality tools, but the beloved home improvement retailer doesn't cut corners when it comes to providing back to the community. Behind the scenes, the company works hard to provide veterans, students and first aid throughout the United States. It's all part of Harbor Freight's Giving Back campaign. The company's deep respect for military men and women has led to the Harbor Freight Tools Foundation, which makes annual contributions to the National Coalition for Homeless Veterans serving those who served the country - and is now grappling with mental illness and other problems that compromise their quality of life. So when you support Harbor Freight, you also support veterans and their families. Children benefit from your loyalty to Harbour Freight, too - and so do their teachers. Harbor Freight Tools for schools ensures that students under the 12th grade receive a qualified trade education. The company even offers grants worth $1 million to qualified trade teachers in public schools across the country, thanks to the Harbor Freight Tools for Schools Award for Excellence in Teaching. And don't forget their grant program, the Spark Award, which donates tools to qualified occupation classes that are prepping a new generation of traders and DIYers in public schools. First responders to natural disasters such as hurricanes, floods and earthquakes also benefit from the charity Hand Of Harbor Cargo, which donates tools and funds to police and fire departments. The company even works with the American Red Cross to help victims of natural disasters such as the California wildfires and the aftermath of Hurricane Maria in Puerto Rico. Harbor Freight is not only about arming these relief workers with tools, but is collecting and distributing first aid kits at first aid facilities. Recently, Harbor Cargo went to Latta, North Carolina, after the community was devastated by Hurricane Matthew. The company used its resources to help rebuild Henry Street Park, create new basketball courts and a baseball field, and provide new playground equipment. They also built and planted new garden boxes in underserved public schools throughout Oxnard, California. Suffice it to say, Harbour cargo community volunteers are not afraid to let their hands dirty. So the next time you use your Intra Track Club Membership in Harbor Cargo, you can feel safe knowing your dollars are making it into the hands of the people who care - and that's part of your money back to your community. Now check out 20 things every DIYer should buy in harbor freight! And here are 15 things that we're sure you didn't know you could buy in harbor cargo. Take 3 Radio Shack 10 ohm/ 1 watt resistors (Radio Shack No 271-151, BUY 2 PACKS) clip them short, and solder them in the series. (Yes, I know my solder STINKS.) But if you're not in a hurry to buy a particular item, consider waiting for events like The Sale of Parking, which occur seven times a year and tend to have particularly discounted prices. This kind of savvy store can help you save money on everything from garage staples to stocking pantry. 2/11While The Freight Harbor may not be the best stop for every purchase, there are still many reasons to keep it on the list of favorite stores. Don't believe us? The 3/11 Rawpixel.com/ShutterstockHarbor Freight's Insider Track Club comes with lots of coupons by mail and email, a $10 gift card when buying or renewing memberships and early access to Lot parking sales and other special events. So the question is, do all these benefits make the $30 annual fee worth it to you? (Also note that you can join for two years for $45.) Find out what other benefits the Harbor Freight Insider Trail Club offers. 4/11 Tatomir/ShutterstockIt's no secret that Harbor Freight has a plethora of coupons that appear in weekly flyers, newspapers, mailboxes and emails. But that's not the only way to find deals! There's also a website (harborfreight.com) and a directory, both of which have far more special services, sales and information than a weekly flyer. In addition, the locations in the port will be in line with online prices. The online price is not always better than in-store, but when it does, it's worth bringing it to the cashier's attention, so you can get the best value. These sites collect coupons, special offers and incentives in the hope of attracting savvy buyers. Harbour Freight has many coupons that are usually easy to find, but these sites are also great resources when coming to special events like tent sales or Black Friday deals. 8/11 Sarnia/ShutterstockThe next time you're in a cargo harbor, you may notice the clearance section. As you would expect, they tend to offer great deals, but what the employee is unlikely to tell you is that you are also free to negotiate! After all, the goal of a store with clearance items is to get them out of the building as quickly as possible, and if you buy a few items you have leverage to get the best deal. You will have to ask to speak to a manager or supervisor and it may take a bit of time, but if you can get enough discount it will be well worth it. While you wait to talk to the manager, scroll to this article about negotiating car prices to help you get in the right mindset. 9/11 vchal/ShutterstockPart The reason Harbour Freight has such a big deal is that they buy from manufacturers around the world. As with any product shipped around the world, it is important to check the damage as soon as possible and check the tool itself to make sure it is not damaged. If this is not the case, turn right and return it. 10/11 GaudiLab/ShutterstockIf you ever have a question about a piece of tool or use, keep in mind that Harbor Freight puts a scanning user manual on your site, right on the product page. It's not exactly a secret, but it's amazing how many people (including employees) don't know about it in a second. This is a great way to check the diagram or operating instructions on the part of the chart. The online user manual is also handy when repairing appliances like washing machines. 11/11 Rawpixel.com/ShutterstockCraftsman it's not the only brand to have a lifetime warranty!
